

Development Support Technician

This post is to join a small, friendly, dynamic development team creating internationally used software for supporting people who have difficulty understanding text.

The post will be suitable for an applicant with a good grounding in Windows internals and strong skills in written communication. It will suit a newly trained applicant as well as one with some experience. Training will be given.

Roles include installation development issues, including working with our overseas partners, and creating and implementing software test procedures. A knowledge of network administration would be an advantage.

Salary in the range £16k - £19k depending on experience.

The post is based in Cubbington near Leamington Spa
