Ivory Bangle Lady was found in York in 1901.

She was buried in a stone sarcophagus.

She was buried with jewellery including ivory bangles.

She lived in Roman Britain in the 4th Century.

Ivory Bangle Lady came from North Africa.

She was a very wealthy member of Roman society.

Archaeologists believe she was a Christian.

She was buried with a Christian inscription.

The Roman Empire was centred on the Mediterranean.

The empire included North Africa and the Near East.

People moved all over the empire, including Britain.

Britain was a very multicultural place in Roman times.

The Roman army recruited from all over the empire.

Soldiers came from all over Europe and North Africa.

Administrators and merchants came with the army.

Women and children came to Britain too.
