Colourful Semantics Guidance

Colourful Semantics is an approach created by Alison Bryan to support spoken and written language development. Colourful Semantics is a visual system that uses colour cues to highlight the meaning of words and how they fit together. Sentences are broken down into meaningful parts, with each part linked to a specific colour to help learners understand relationships between words and support sentence building.

The first principle of Colourful Semantics is identifying the verb first (the 'what doing').

Colour coded question prompts help learners explore and organise the essential parts of a sentence:

Who questions are coded orange

What doing questions are coded yellow

What questions are coded green

Where questions are coded blue

This resource includes key questions to support the learner in identifying different parts of a focus sentence. It also includes flashcards for the learner to use to build the sentence. This resource is most suitable for learners who are familiar with who, what doing, what and where words. If the learner is not yet working at this level, it may be appropriate to use resources from our Colourful Semantics Pack. The pack includes pre-made, printable resources that gradually increase in challenge. These can be used sequentially or selected individually to match a learner's current attainment.

Key Questions

Who is watching the fireworks?

What are the family doing?

What are the family watching?

Where are the family watching the fireworks?
